Report of the Investment Managers

As 2016 got under way, international financial markets struggled to find their footing. Volatility reigned in the opening weeks as China market controls and a tumbling oil price unsettled investors already anxious about economic growth prospects. However, by the end of the year global equities achieved a return of about 10% in local currency terms. And that was achieved despite previously unthinkable scenarios coming to pass: Donald Trump in the White House and the UK out of the European Union. Those electoral bombshells kept investors on edge, but many stock markets actually moved to record highs shortly after those events.

Equity markets were broadly underpinned by continued low interest rates – the Federal Reserve’s aim of four rate hikes in 2016 faded as market volatility, economic uncertainty, the Brexit vote and US elections served to stay the hand of the central bank. By the time it announced its one rate increase in December, the market was beginning to price in up to three more in 2017 and investors were trying to make sense of what Trump’s policies might mean for economic growth and corporate profits.

As measured by the FTSE World Index, global equities gained 10% on a total return basis (+29.6% in GBP, +11.9% in EUR). Not only did most equity markets finish higher for the year, there was also a notable shift in preferences within markets – having generally favoured ‘defensive’ sectors such as utilities, healthcare and consumer staples, investors began to rotate towards stocks considered more likely to benefit from a rising rate environment. Trump’s spending plans and commitment to lower regulations are widely seen as beneficial for materials and bank sectors, while energy stocks received an additional bounce from oil price gains following planned production cuts by oil producing nations.

It was a mixed year, both in terms of the fluctuating nature of market performance through 2016 and in terms of where the best returns were achieved. In the euro area, ‘core’ country stock markets tended to outperform the ‘peripheral’ markets; Germany’s DAX Index gained 6.9% and France’s CAC 40 Index was up 4.9%, but Italy’s market was down 10.2% (despite a 17% final quarter gain). Worries about Italy’s banks persisted amid little improvement in the size of non-performing loan portfolios, while the economy struggled to make headway as the downward trend in unemployment reversed. A Government referendum on political reforms failed in early December and Prime Minister Renzi resigned. The FTSE World Eurobloc Index returned 5.3% (+21.9% in GBP).

US equities were among the best performers, with the FTSE World North America Index returning 12.3% (+15.8% in EUR, +34.1% in GBP). The low rate environment helped underpin gains as the Fed put off rate hikes until it made its December move. The uplift in economic activity as 2016 progressed provided a tailwind as did the general expectation that Trump policies may boost growth in 2017. Top performing sectors for the full year included energy, financials and telecoms, with healthcare, real estate and consumer staples bringing up the rear.

The UK FTSE All-Share Index returned 16.8% for the 12 months (+0.8% in EUR). The London stock exchange lists many large global companies that are likely to benefit from a weaker pound as it enhances the value of overseas revenues and export competitiveness. Underpinned by a pick-up in commodity prices in later months, energy and mining related stocks were strong performers for the year, while banks reversed earlier losses. The laggards typically came from the previously popular defensive sectors of telecoms and consumer staples.

In an eventful year, the Bank of Japan cut deposit rates into negative territory in January for the first time ever. This initially did little to stem the yen’s appreciation; indeed, it took the ascension of Trump and rising US rates to put downward pressure on the currency. This then helped Japan’s stock market reverse earlier losses – the FTSE World Japan Index recorded a total return of -0.3% (+22.7% in GBP, +5.9% in EUR).

A generally good year for emerging markets was tempered by a weak finish as rising US bond yields and the stronger dollar diverted funds from EM assets. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index achieved a local currency return of 9.7% (+14.5% in EUR, +32.6% in GBP). Among individual markets, the FTSE Brazil Index soared 38.1% (+72.9% in EUR, +100% in GBP amid Brazilian currency strength) as commodity prices rose and markets looked favourably on efforts to combat corruption. China’s Shanghai Index lost 12.3% (-15.3% in EUR, -2.1% in GBP) in the year. Unsurprisingly perhaps Mexican assets struggled and while the FTSE Mexico Index returned +8.6% (-6.2% in EUR), the peso’s weakness wiped away most of that for international investors – though not for UK-based investors as the GBP return was also +8.6%.

The figures stated in this report are historical and not indicative of future performance.

Developed global bond markets generally posted gains in 2016, notwithstanding a final quarter sell-off. For much of the year, sluggish growth, benign inflation and intermittent geopolitical jitters combined to tempt investors towards government bonds, despite the very low yields on offer. However, as investors rotated towards riskier assets amid shifting inflation and interest rate expectations and the implications of a Trump presidency, the scale of bond gains was eroded. Bond gains peaked in the weeks after the June Brexit vote, with yields falling to record lows; for a time, the entire Swiss government yield curve was negative. Eurozone bonds had already gained on ECB interest rate cuts and extensions to its bond purchase programme; German 10-year bond yields fell below zero, before rebounding to end December at a still-low 0.21%. UK gilt yields also hit record lows as the Bank of England cut interest rates in response to the referendum result. Having started 2016 close to 2%, the 10-year UK gilt yield fell to just 0.52% in early August before ending the year at 1.50% as the economy displayed resilience and inflation moved higher. Japanese 10-year bonds ended 2016 on a barely positive yield of 0.05%, having hit a low of -0.28%. Ten-year US yields fell to a record low of 1.36%, before Trump and higher rate prospects saw that rebound to 2.44% by year-end.

Currency markets reflected much of the volatility through the year. The biggest losers in the year included Mexico's peso amid concerns that President Trump will follow through with building a wall and tearing up the NAFTA trade deal. The British pound had an equally poor year as the electorate unexpectedly voted to leave the EU. Sterling lost almost 16% against the euro, 19% against the US dollar and 23% against the Japanese yen.

The figures stated in this report are historical and not indicative of future performance.

Outlook

Despite June's surprise vote by UK voters to exit the European Union, output in the UK did not collapse as many had predicted and continental Europe thus far does not seem to have been materially impacted. China, after causing considerable market anxiety at the start of 2016 on a sharp fall in its currency and fears of a rapid economic growth slowdown, faded from being a focus of concern for global investors in 2016, turning in what is expected to be a respectable 6.7% rate of growth. Likewise, commodity prices opened the year falling sharply, only to find a bottom in mid-February – providing timely relief to commodity-exporting emerging markets such as Brazil and Russia. Aiding emerging markets and keeping global financial conditions easy was a cautious Fed that hiked rates just once in 2016, with a more aggressive rate of tightening being forecast entering 2017. Finally, the US has emerged from a highly contentious presidential election with a clear result and a more conciliatory tone from the president-elect than might have been suggested by earlier campaign rhetoric.

While the Trump administration assumes office on 20 January with an initial strong vote of confidence in markets, there are still plenty of headwinds challenging a return to more robust economic and earnings growth. Global (including US) productivity growth remains in a long secular decline that has limited a return to growth rates typically observed during expansions. Members of the Federal Open Market Committee are forecasting three 0.25% increases in the Federal Funds rate for 2017.

Looking ahead, our view of global equity markets is cautiously optimistic, although we are aware that an improved growth trajectory has been priced in for the incoming Trump administration without any guaranteed legislative changes. Our allocations include modest underweights to international developed markets, neutral to emerging markets and an overweight to US equities. In international developed markets, our underweight in part reflects a perceived decline in the efficacy of monetary policy support in the eurozone and Japan. Across broad asset classes, our portfolios now hold a slight overweight in growth assets – primarily equities over fixed income and cash. Within fixed income, we have taken notice of the rising trend in rates and hold a neutral position on US duration and an underweight position to global government bonds outside the US where long-term rates relative to fundamentals appear less aligned and on an expectation global bond buying programmes will further moderate rather than accelerate. Given the still mostly favourable policy backdrop and near-record-low default rates in high-yield bonds, we maintain a cautiously optimistic outlook with a small overweight to credit assets with minimal duration exposure.

Responsibility of the “Réviseur d’entreprises agréé”

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with International Standards on Auditing as adopted for Luxembourg by the “Commission de Surveillance du Secteur Financier”. Those standards require that we comply with ethical requirements and plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the judgment of the “Réviseur d’entreprises agréé”, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the “Réviseur d’entreprises agréé” considers internal control relevant to the entity’s preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity’s internal control. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by the Board of Directors of the SICAV, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.
